

DEAN HAS HOPEFUL MESSAGE

Hundreds Are Thrilled With Stirring Address on "Impressions of England"

MANY ARE TURNED AWAY FROM HALL

"Four factors in economic events have given me encouragement. First was the British leadership shown last July at the Lausanne Conference, when it was agreed that war reparations should be canceled. Second was the decision that a scheme should be formed for the financial reconstruction of Central Europe. Third was the League of Nations appeal for a world economic conference, and fourth the formation and record of the National Government, which embodied the principle of England first, not party." From these four factors, Very Rev. C. S. Quinlan, Dean of Columbia, found a hopeful message for nearly 1,000 persons who crowded into the Memorial Hall last night to hear the speaker give his "Impressions of England." Many were turned from the doors, so it was decided to repeat the lecture at a later date.

GREATER PRESTIGE Following up the four points already enumerated, the Dean said that "as a result of these four factors, the prestige of Great Britain is greater than ever before and the future is bright with hope."

England, the speaker said, was a land of paradoxes, whimsicalities and illogicalities. It was no wonder, he declared, that foreigners did not understand her.

"Wherein, then, lay the spell that England threw about her children?" the Dean asked. Answering, he said "She holds her children with a bond of eternal intimacy as only the mother can be intimate to the child she has suckled and borne."

The speaker then followed this pronouncement with some fascinating, intimate sketches of English life and ultimately took up the much-awaited subject of what changes were being made in the home.

London, he stated, was undergoing an architectural change.

New Vice-President of Religious Body

Rev. A. G. E. Munson, who has been chosen vice-president of the Victoria School Board, is shown in the photograph.

England is the same and not the same. Here is a continuity among changes," the Dean declared, becoming a little American in aspect, "not that they have adopted prohibition or the American version of the fifth commandment that one give Pop and Ma the glad hand."

"A good deal of American capital is flowing into England. You can see ten-cent stores everywhere and Ford is helping to democratize England. Miniature golf courses have disappeared unwept and unnumbered. There is more American slang. In one modern hotel I found toothpicks and chewing gum. It made one feel quite homelike. Advertising is being modeled after American advertising, while the populace is more mobile as a result of cheap cars and cheap transportation. The nomads are multiplying," he said.

Among other topics the Dean touched upon was unemployment insurance. He told of how the insurance was now separated from the transitional benefits, and of how the latter was given only after an investigation had proven that such benefits were needed by the applicant. He advocated unemployment insurance as a means by which people could achieve greater self-reliance and independence.

MAJOR WHEADON AWARDED MEDAL

Brigadier J. Sutherland Brown Performs Interesting Ceremony at A. N. Veterans' Club

At the monthly meeting of the Victoria unit of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, held in the clubrooms last night, Major W. H. Wheadon was decorated with the Colonial Officers' Auxiliary Long Service Medal by Brigadier J. Sutherland Brown, C.M.G., D.S.O., district officer commanding Military District No. 11.

The general expressed the pleasure it gave him to decorate an old soldier's breast, but especially was it so when the recipient had rendered such long and valuable voluntary service as Major Wheadon had done. He gave a resume of the service, which began with the 2nd Somerset Light Infantry in 1886, continued in Canada with the Rocky Mountain Rangers (102nd Militia Regiment), and in France from March, 1915, to September, 1917, with the 48th Highlanders (15th Bn., C.E.F.).

From that time Major Wheadon held an administrative appointment with the Pay Corps, and since coming to Victoria in 1920 has been associated with the city and its cadets, being at present a member of the central committee which directs the activities of the 388th Cadet Battalion.

SPEAKER DECIDES LIBERAL MOTION IS OUT OF ORDER

eral, attacked the Liberals from Quebec for their general attitude on tariffs and the Imperial Conference agreements. Hon. J. C. Elliott, former Minister of Public Works, criticized the general tariff policy of the Government.

The debate was taken up by Dr. W. D. Cowan (Conservative, Long Lake). If the British Empire could not "drag this old world out of the slough of the depression," there was little hope for it, he declared. Dr. Cowan's address was plentifully interspersed with direct and humorous attacks on certain members of the Opposition and frequent exclamations of loyalty to his leader, Premier R. B. Bennett, who, he said, he had known for thirty-five years.

"In all that long association," he said, "I never knew him to do a wrong thing."

The world wanted leadership, Dr. Cowan declared. "Who could lead us?" he asked. "Could it be Gandhi? Could it be De Valera? Could it be the Liberal party in Great Britain? No—that party is extinct like the dodo bird, and like the Liberal party in Canada will soon be extinguished."

"Could it be the leader of the Opposition?" Dr. Cowan continued. "Say, Mr. Speaker, if that man went into the Imperial Conference and delivered a three-and-a-half-hour speech like he did here the other day, all the delegates would be straining for the Cannibal Islands to escape him."

Request Council To Improve Road Entering School

An effort by representatives of the Victoria School Board to have the Mount Douglas Parent-Teacher Association to have the municipal council undertake improvement of the entrance to the high school has been given consideration at a meeting of the council last night.

The request was deferred, pending a report from the municipal clerk on the question of collected high school fees being the property of the council since it was suggested that the entrance to the high school be improved, as it was in a shameful condition and would become worse in the rainy season.

RARE WORKS TO BE PERFORMED

Neah-Kah-Nie Quartette to Play With Local Amateur Orchestra on November 1

Something entirely new in orchestral music will take place in Victoria on Tuesday, November 1, when the Victoria Chamber Orchestra, conducted by Michel Penha, leader of the Neah-Kah-Nie string quartette which is now in the city, will give a concert at the Empress Hotel.

This announcement is the result of the enthusiasm aroused among the musicians by the visit of the Neah-Kah-Nie quartette and the fine interest which it has provoked in the Victoria Chamber Music Society and their president, J. H. Hinton, who have sponsored the visiting musicians' chamber concert here. About twenty-five Victorians, specially picked from local orchestras and string assemblies, will constitute the orchestra.

The numbers announced for the orchestral programme are as follows:

RARE NUMBERS Each concerto for two violins: Boccherini's cello concerto, and Mozart's concerto for violin and viola. Suite Pipes and Hubert Sorensen and second violinists of the quartette, respectively, will lead in the Bach concerto; Mr. Sorensen, who is the junior member of the quartette, will play with Abraham Weiss, the violin player, in the solo parts of the Mozart concerto, and Michel Penha, of course, will take the solos in the Boccherini cello concerto.

CONDUCTORS

The Bach and Mozart numbers will be conducted by Mr. Penha, as he is playing the cello solo in the Boccherini concerto, his place as conductor is being delegated to Stanley Bulley, choir leader and member of the Victoria Chamber Music Society. Mr. Penha, who is an enthusiastic as Mr. Penha about the character of the material they have discovered in the city, and are convinced the performance on November 1 will surprise concert-goers who have not yet been awakened to the fact that there is such a group of talent here.

Shot Husband in Mistake for Deer

LONGVIEW, Wash., Oct. 20.—Mrs. William Berta accidentally shot and killed her husband near Ostrander, north of here, today while they were deer hunting, authorities were informed.

The man and his wife separated while hunting and his wife mistook the grey cap he was wearing for a deer and fired. Her husband died almost immediately.

The accident occurred within forty-eight hours of the close of the deer season.

A European naturalist declared recently that butterflies sing to their young.

BRITAIN'S WORK IS COMMENDED

Brig. J. Sutherland Brown Tells of British Activities in Great War

Brigadier J. Sutherland Brown, officer commanding military district No. 11, a veteran himself of the Great War, has no doubt as to where the credit must lie for the winning of it. It is with the British people, not only the navy, the army and the air force, but coupled with that the merchant service, the financiers, the statesmen and the people themselves.

In an address before the Army and Navy Veterans unit last evening, he pointed to the qualities which the British people possessed which did not make for extensive advertising of what they as a people did.

An interesting point was interjected into the remarks of Brigadier Brown which suggested that the Germans lost the war probably by the action of a commander retiring after the Battle of the Somme back to the Hindenburg line. Had the Germans not done this, the war might have ended differently, he said.

MIGHT HAVE WON

Had the final drive been made by the Germans from the front from which they retired, Amiens might have fallen to them and it was a debatable question whether the honors of the war might not have gone to the Germans. Mistakes were made in the war of necessity, and it was foolish to attribute all the mistakes to one side.

The speaker paid a splendid compliment to General Douglas Haig, the British commanding officer and the only one in that position who remained throughout the war in this commanding position among the armies which were engaged in the conflict. History said Brigadier Brown, would justify General Haig as a really great man. No man had a kinder heart than the British commanding officer, and his military knowledge was of the highest rank. He had the respect of all ranks and classes.

In referring to the men who served their country during the war, he alluded to the splendid way in which General Haig co-operated with Field Marshal F. E. Smith, worked in wonderful union.

LEADERS IN ALL LINES

In Kitchener they had a great organizer and in all lines of endeavor the British people were not wanting in the war. It was the British nation that was called upon to do the financing and it was the British people who were facing the situation today and meeting the liabilities that arose out of this financing, not alone for themselves, but for other allies.

SEEKS AID OF MUNICIPALITY

Chairman of Saanich School Board Asks Council's Help in Paying Fees

A report on the success of the high school fees collected by the Saanich School Board and payable by parents of the pupils more than sixteen years of age was submitted by F. V. Hobbs, chairman of the board, to the Saanich Council last night.

Trustee Hobbs also made a plea for assistance from the council for the parents who, because of destitute circumstances, were unable to pay the fees.

In making his request Trustee Hobbs pointed out that the board did not want the system to break down, explaining that it was not in a position to allow exceptions without the council's aid.

Trustee W. S. Thorpe stated that $165 had been collected from 107 pupils subject to the fee.

LENGTHY DISCUSSION

A lengthy discussion ensued, during which the council was assured that such action was being requested in order to clarify the position of the trustees. Reeve William Crouch stated that this might lead to trustees placing the onus of excluding over-age pupils from payment on the council. Assurance was given, however, that the trustees would not adopt such an attitude and the board was solely requesting a definite principle to follow.

The council later decided that it would accept no responsibility in the nonpayment of these fees and that parents unable to pay them should expect no assistance from it.

For sticking pins through peas, which he fed to pigeons, Henry Willetts was fined $55 in Birmingham, England, court recently.

Refuse Request Of Welfare Head

A request by the superintendent of welfare to have the Saanich Council to give $200 towards the expenses of a woman in receipt of a mother's pension who desires to return to England was refused at last night's meeting of that body.

Under the present circumstances the council would pay the woman more than $250 during the next seven and one-half months while she is eligible for pension. The superintendent felt that it would be an economy move by the council to pay the $200 instead of the full amount.

The request was refused, however, when Reeve William Crouch explained that it was possible that before long the cost of the mother's pension would be lifted from the council.

Four separate and distinct plans, each showing a way of saving the city $1,000,000, have been submitted to the city council of Glasgow, Scotland.

Report Challenge To Public Thought Says R. W. Mayhew

Victoria Member of Kidd Committee Gives Reasons For Recommendations Made After Survey of Provincial Affairs—Onus on People

BRITISH Columbia will derive lasting benefit from the Kidd report if the people will wake up to their own affairs and help to bring about a balanced budget by curtailment of requests for public expenditures and through insistence on wise management by their elected leaders, R. W. Mayhew, Victoria member on the committee, told the Rotary Club yesterday, in the course of a stout defence of the report.

The report had been prepared, he declared, as much on business as on self-interest and was aimed solely to bring the direction of public thought into channels capable of helping the province to improve its financial position in the future. Twenty years of deficits almost unrelieved could not be continued, he warned; and the whole system of legislative control would have to be simplified and its costs reduced.

"The onus for mistakes of the past," he declared, "is as much on business men as any other section of the public, including politicians. The thing to do now was to rectify these mistakes by use of greater financial sanity in the future."

Mr. Mayhew handled the report with restraint, gave the reasons for some of the principal findings; and reiterated debt figures and the committee's opinion that the P.C.E. should be abandoned. He conceded that state education up to fifteen years

League of Nations' Home Progresses

THE new home of the League of Nations will be a third of a mile long when completed, and the League expects to take possession in 1934. The estimated cost of the new building, which will be a masterpiece of modern architecture, is $25,000,000. The five architects who designed the building are French, Swiss, Italian and Hungarian. This picture shows part of the new Palace of Nations in the making.

The total debt of the province was $143,000,000, and sinking funds were held to a total of $24,000,000, leaving a net debt of $119,000,000. The net debt had been $119,000,000 in 1932; while $19,000,000 had been added to the debt in the last two years.

gating $1,200,000 in the same period. The deficits had been evenly distributed in the last two decades, being $5,285,000 in 1914 and $4,819,000 in 1931.

"If the report is to be of any benefit to the province, you men have got to take an interest in your own affairs. We are not trying to stifle criticism of the report, but if we can focus the attention of citizens on the province on their own affairs, then we will have accomplished what we set out to do. We have been too much engrossed in business and have left too much to the politicians, and if we are hurt now, it is our own fault," said Mr. Mayhew bluntly.

EDUCATION EXPENSIVE He was not a debater, he continued, and did not propose to attempt to answer Professor Angus in his recent comment on the report. The plain facts were that education was costing the province $3,200,000 a year, based on figures in 1931; or on a per capita of population basis of twice the cost in Alberta and Saskatchewan, and several times that in Quebec. It was true, he said, that the per capita pupil cost was less than in Saskatchewan, but more than in Alberta and Quebec.

"It is a question whether or not we should continue to this extent to the municipalities, or whether we should expect them to carry a little more of the load themselves," Mr. Mayhew continued.

NOT CRITICAL The report, he resumed, had not been critical of the University of the Normal Schools as institutions, but had sincerely doubted if the necessary funds would be available to carry on such services to the same extent as in the past. Students at Normal Schools should be charged seven years at their own expense, and this was the practice in other professions. Why should teaching be singled out, he asked.

While the committee had recommended charging of fees after the fourth year in public schools, he personally would be willing to see this set at fifteen years as the age limit, with a system of scholarships for exceptional students after that age. Exception was taken by the committee to the view that education should be no limit to free education, he said.

"We think it is time the people get ready to do this. It is not better that we give children the opportunity of learning to read and write, so that they may work out their own salvation, rather than that we should load them down with a debt they will not be able to carry? The time is coming when we must spend only for what we really need, and not for what we want or would like," Mr. Mayhew said.

RAILWAY INCURSED "We recommended that the Pacific Great Eastern Railway be closed down. You have in the P.G.E. $65,000,000 of the net debt of $119,000,000. It is no joke. The railway was a $715,000 a year in operating account alone, with interest charges. We would have to keep on spending large sums for maintenance and replacements, or else let the road run down and run into a real big expenditure later on."

"There is talk of a sale of the P.G.E. I believe no one will buy the road without reading the Bulletin report, made by a former C.P.R. engineer, who has statements have proved to be very conservative. It is absolutely insane to think of anyone buying the P.G.E. with an honest intention of operating it," Mr. Mayhew declared.

P.G.E. AS MAKE-WEIGHT If a deal were made for the road, it would be by people who wanted millions of acres of land, and wanted, too, reputed far lands adjacent to the area under discussion. In such a deal, he predicted, the railway would be thrown in as a make-weight.

Mr. Mayhew received a cordial hearing and was thanked at the close of his address by Captain George McGregor, chairman. He was introduced to the gathering by Rotarian Victor Clark. His Worship Mayor David Leeming was an interested guest at the function. The Rotary Orchestra lived the luncheon period with an excellent programme.

MRS. SARAH GREEN DIES There passed away Thursday morning, at the Royal Jubilee Hospital, Sarah Green, late of 741 View Street. She was born in London, England, and came to this city four months ago from Portage la Prairie. She is survived by her daughter, Mrs. Joseph Malt, Portage la Prairie, at present in Victoria; one sister, Mrs. B. Wigby, Royal Lake, Manitoba; also one brother, Arthur Green, London, England. Nunn will officiate, and interment will be made in the Royal Oak Burial Park.

BANK FAILURE CAUSED CRASH

C. E. Walters Details Transactions of Corporations Before Stock Decline

Echoes of the financial boom days preceding the crash of 1929 that sent banks and corporations into the hands of the receivers, were heard in County Court here yesterday when Charles E. Walters, former bank manager in Washington State, testified in his fight against extradition to the United States to face a Federal charge of grand larceny in connection with stock transactions entered into late in 1929.

Mr. Walters was on the stand for four and a half hours, nearly three hours of which was taken up with a grueling cross-examination by C. L. Harrison, prosecuting attorney. With the testimony of Mr. Walters, the hearing approached its end and an adjournment was taken until 10:30 o'clock this morning, when lawyers will present their arguments to Judge Peter S. Lampman. A decision is expected some time today.

CONTROLLED BANKS Mr. Walters, sixty-seven years old, admitted to the court he was president of the Bankers' Holding Corporation, president of the Charles E. Walters Company, and a president and director of banks in Washington. The Bankers' Holding Corporation was purchased by Mr. Walters late in 1928 for the purpose of buying banks. He maintained that in the closing days of 1929 the corporation had control of four banks, two in Auburn, Washington, and one at Winlock and another at Bremerton.

Mr. Walters is accused in a Washington State warrant of grand larceny of obtaining money from Merton J. Moores under false pretences in that he had informed Mr. Moores that the Bankers' Holding Corporation controlled four banks. Mr. Moores bought $2,450 worth of stock in the corporation which afterwards became defunct.

ADMITTING OWNERSHIP In the witness box Mr. Walters stated that if he told Mr. Moores that the corporation controlled, or owned, four banks he had told the truth. He also said that he was the head of the Charles E. Walters Company, which company was the Bankers' Holding Corporation, of which he was also the president. Stock in the four mentioned banks had been purchased by the Bankers' Holding Corporation through the Charles E. Walters Company. The witness admitted that the bank stocks had been pledged with other banks outside the control of the corporation for loans for the purpose of carrying on the business of the Bankers' Holding Corporation and that stock in the corporation had been sold to the public.

CRASH OF BANK Many thousands of dollars, he said, had passed through the companies and corporations of which he had control during the financial boom days of 1929. The failure of one of the banks under the control of Mr. Walters' corporation resulted in a general crash of the Bankers' Corporation and the winding up of the Charles E. Walters Company.

Questioned by Stuart Henderson, his counsel, Mr. Walters said that he had made no misrepresentation to Mr. Moores concerning the status of the corporation or the banks controlled by it. He denied he had made any statement that he was president of the Bankers' Holding Corporation, and that he was the head of the Charles E. Walters Company.

Mr. Harrison asked if the corporation officers consisted of Mr. Walters, his son and wife, and Mr. Walters said they did.

BOOKS REMOVED The books of the Charles E. Walters Company had been transferred from the State of Washington to the State of Oregon at the request of the company's counsel, and the books of the Bankers' Corporation had gone to Reno, Nevada, under a petition for a receivership filed by Ralph Walters, the son, who was vice-president of the Charles E. Walters Company.

During the afternoon hearing, Mr. Walters was on the stand under cross-examination and Mr. Harrison suggested that the company had been operating in the State of Washington without having a licence. Mr. Walters said they had a licence to sell stock of the Bankers' Corporation but admitted they did not have a licence to carry on a general brokerage business in that State.

CAME TO VICTORIA Mr. Walters said that when the Auburn bank failed his corporation became bankrupt and assigned being entered by creditors. He claimed that after the crash he continued his residence in the United States, coming to Victoria late in 1931. He denied he had knowledge of a pending action against him at the time he left Seattle.

Mr. Walters was arrested in Victoria on September 4, and has been in custody since. Ralph Walters is awaiting his hearing and is also in custody here.

SENTENCED TO JAIL NANAIMO, Oct. 20.—Chief Justice Morrison last evening sentenced Tong Sam, charged under the Narcotic Drugs Act, to six months in jail and a $200 fine, with an extra six months if the fine is not paid. Accused pleaded guilty.

Little Freddie came home from school wearing a pumpled frown. "Grandpa," he said, "when did you become grandpa?"

"When you were born, sonny," said the old fellow.

"And if I had not been born, would you never have been a grandpa?" asked the boy.

"I don't suppose so," grandpa replied.

"Then what are you going to give me for it?" Freddie asked.

LOWER TARIFFS

There is disagreement between Mr. Mackenzie King and Sir John Simon as to the meaning of the trade agreements entered into between the Empire countries as a result of the Imperial Conference. The Liberal Leader, in his three and a half hour address in Parliament on the subject, expressed the opinion that they meant an increase in tariffs and that it was this feature of them to which his party is opposed. In fact, from the standpoint of an examination of these agreements, the Liberals at Ottawa could not be putting up a weaker argument because it is one opposed to the facts of the situation.

Sir John Simon is one of the most astute lawyers in the Empire. Presumably he is able to understand the meaning of words and figures, of schedules and changes of tariffs, of preferences and their implications. He has made a close examination of the new trade agreements. He is a Liberal in politics but he does not oppose tariff policies for the sake of his party leanings. Here is his statement on the trade agreements which differs very materially from that of Mr. Mackenzie King; particularly in the fact that it is succinct and compressed into a brief number of words:

"The Cabinet (British) sent seven of its ablest members to Ottawa. They belonged to different parties. They worked very hard. No one can suggest that others would have worked better; and they came back all of one mind. I make the assertion now that the net result of the Ottawa agreement will be found to be a lowering of tariffs and the creation of freer conditions of trade. At Ottawa we have begun the task of lowering world tariffs. We are free now to negotiate with foreign countries for freer conditions of trade over a wide range of commodities, including the whole field of manufactured articles, and, in fact, in the case of some foreign countries negotiations to that end have already begun."

TRAFALGAR DAY

All who know of the record of the British Navy, in peace and war, will commemorate its achievements, if only in their hearts, on this anniversary of one of its epic days. That record is the fruit of energy, discipline and daring, of intense humanitarian principles, of an ever readiness to succor the weak, to go to the aid of distress, to carry, wherever its lawful occasions lie, the ideas of liberty, justice and mercy which during a thousand years of its history have been developing. It has played its part in a large way in increasing the happiness, prosperity and welfare of the world.

There is an unfortunate coterie of thought that has developed in these latter days which believes that the British Navy is a cause of intensive development of armaments; that, in fact, it is a menace to the peace of the world. The protagonists of such an idea have been the main-spring of action at international conferences which have decreed a topping off of Britain's sea power. They have sought to teach the peoples of the Empire to think in terms of internationalism; to forget their own traditions and what made the Empire what it is. This propaganda has silted in an admirable way the designs and ambitions of other Powers, who, ever since the Great War, have concentrated on making the instrument, more responsible than any other for the winning of that war, a weakening factor in comparison with its strength of the past.

It is well to recall the form of propaganda with which human thought is being suffused on an anniversary such as this. There is an effort to make the British people forget their past and subscribe to a doctrinal advantage in the economic situation, but, as well, the moral and intellectual gain and the value attached in the eyes of the world to the achievements of the Royal Navy. In all times of emergency during the recent centuries direct and immediate blessings have been derived from sea power. Those blessings have been economic, political and strategic. It is these that Britain is being asked to sacrifice. It is these that are the target of every international conference on the subject of disarmament. Since such discussions ensued as an outcome of a trend of thought so assiduously fostered, the British Navy, and that instrument alone of both peace and war, has been made to suffer diminution of strength. Practically all the other Great Powers have benefited relatively in the provision of means for national security as an outcome of "disarmament" conferences.

It was only the other day that an earthquake spread disaster in Macedonia. Immediately on news of this happening being received Sir Ernie Chatfield, the commander-in-chief in the Mediterranean, steamed for the Chalcidic Peninsula in H.M.S. Queen Elizabeth with all available warships. Within twenty-four hours hospital equipment, fresh water, stores and foodstuffs were being landed. Sailors blew up tottering walls which threatened further damage. They relieved misery on every side. They reached out the helping hand to those whom the Greek authorities could not assist when assistance was most needed. They rendered, in fact, immediate and most valuable aid to the sufferers, what the Greek President called in thanking Great Britain, "inestimable and efficacious service." There was a parallel in this to what was done when Messina and Reggio were destroyed by earthquake in 1908. Then, too, the Mediterranean Fleet was first at the scene. It was the same during the revolt of convicts in the Brazilian Isle of Fernando da Noronha when women and children were rescued; and again when the Chinese Squadron went to the rescue of sufferers from the Yangtze floods. Scores of examples of similar work in time of peace could be quoted, to show what kind of an instrument the British Navy is in the alleviation of distress everywhere. Those who would decimate the British Navy forget its record in both peace and war. They forget what Nelson stood for in the anxious years preceding Waterloo. They forget that but for the Navy there would be no British Empire today and perhaps little or no freedom on earth. They forget what its achievements have been in both peace and war throughout the Seven Seas, and the task of mercy that it is everywhere so often accomplishing despite its detractors. It is a spineless and unpatriotic propaganda that is designed to reduce the Royal Navy below its margin necessary to national security. Any instrument in the world today, more especially in these times of unbalanced thoughts, which has so fully fulfilled its tasks with humanity, courage and resources and has made men better men than they would otherwise be, is deserving of wholesome and wholesome encouragement. This is apart altogether from the imperative necessity of the Navy as the greatest insurance policy ever written in connection with the safety and maintenance of all we have and are.

DEPORTMENT AT CARD TABLES

In these days of the spread of the game of bridge there are new opportunities of studying human mentality. Cards, no less than the more serious things of life, are apt to show up the weaknesses and strong points of players. Some advice on the matter is given by the Bridge Correspondent of The London Times, who says: "Correct deportment at the card table is not easy to define. It does not necessarily involve an sphinx-like demeanor; but it does necessitate an attitude of give-and-take, of bear and forbear. All players must or should recognize that they are liable to runs of vile luck. It is an essential part of cards. Complaining is futile, is tiresome to everyone else, and also is infectious. It is easy for a club cardroom to become infected with carping habits. The tone of a room, once lowered, is not easily restored."

Probably the printed notice in a famous club of Paris is the best for card players to follow. It lays down that no player should comment upon his good or bad luck or suggest that he has won by his skill or lost because he held poor cards. That, in effect, is another way of rendering the old sportsman's rule, an ancient maxim of card playing—that a gentleman never betrayed by any word or gesture whether he was winning or losing, whether he was holding good cards or bad.

Like the Liberals in this province, Mr. Mackenzie King at Ottawa believes it is the duty of the Opposition to oppose any and every scheme devised by his political opponents for the amelioration of economic conditions. His only belief in human effort and human intelligence is when these are concentrated in those who espouse Liberal policies. It is a strange conception when co-operative action is so desirable to cure the world's woes.

A possibility that nitrate may be reduced to half its present price is indicated by the discovery of a young engineer in the Norwegian Hydro-Electric Nitrogen Corporation who, as a result of experiments, has obtained nitrate of soda from salt water. The method, secretly affecting which is being closely guarded, has been patented in all countries. It is proposed to start experimental production in the near future.

SILVER

Slowly, silently, now the moon
Walks the night in her silver shoes;
This way, and that, she peers, and sees
Silver-gates upon the watersides;
One by one the casements catch
Her beams beneath the silvery thatch;
Cooched in his kennel like a log,
With paws of silver sleeps the dog;
From their shadowy cote the white-breasted peep
Of doves in a silver-feathered sleep;
A harvest moon goes scampering by,
With silver claws and silver eye;
And moves like fish in the water gleam,
By silver reeds in a silver stream.

—Walter de la Mare.

THE IRISH PARADOX

While all other countries in the world are seriously concerned about finding markets for their produce, Ireland has deliberately chosen to quarrel with the world's best, but substantially her only customer. It is not so much an instance of cutting off the nose to spite the face, but of cutting off the face to spite the nose, and that is a different type of beauty to sustain—Melbourne-Australia.

There's nothing half so sweet in life as love's young dream.—Moore.

Note and Comment

By R. B. D.

Now let trace follow the line in the good old British way—Toronto Globe is Liberal paper.

The statement has often been made that the people of Canada in the mass are not interested in politics. That statement is true, but the truth of it is limited in its application. When there are no important political issues at stake, when the people regard the actions of party politicians merely as struggles of the "ins" to stay in and of the "outs" to get in, they are indifferent regarding the results of debates in parliament or speeches on the hustings. But when really vital political issues arise, the people are aroused, and then there is hardly ever any doubt about their interest in politics.

We have been surveying the political history of Canada since the dawn of the day of Confederation, and as a result of that survey have discovered that only four times in the history of the Dominion have the people been deeply aroused over really fundamental political issues. The first great political event in the history of Canada to stir the imagination of the people was the movement for the union of the then Four Provinces. After that union was consummated it was followed by an agitation for the union of all the British possessions on the North American continent. That union also was consummated, but it was not accomplished without some opposition and the provocation of feelings which were not allayed for many years.

The consummation of Confederation produced a Canada united politically, but it did not produce a Canada which enjoyed in full measure fruits of nation-wide prosperity. The country was blessed in a wealth of natural products, but was unfortunate in the fact that there were no profitable markets for those products, for other nations were beginning to adopt the principles of protection, thus conserving for home products the domestic markets. Canada was also developing manufacturing industries, but there was no protection in Canada for home manufactured products. The country was flooded with the products of foreign countries, and the result was a depression deeper and more disastrous in its effects than the depression of this or any other day.

The third epochal event in the political history of Canada was the movement which culminated in the adoption of a National Policy after the defeat of the Liberal Mackenzie government in the year 1878 by the government of Sir John A. Macdonald. That event in the history of Canada demonstrated that when great issues are presented to the people, the people display not only interest but enthusiasm in politics. A survey of the history of Canada also confounds the arguments of free traders that prosperity is an exclusive property of free trade and that adversity invariably does the footsteps of protection. After the adoption of protection by the Macdonald government Canada enjoyed a prolonged period of prosperity. There were ups and downs in business of course; but in general the fact may be postulated that prosperity was the portion of the country until a depression swept the entire world as a consequence of the orgy of speculation which followed the war, consequences for which no government in the world was directly responsible and which no power in the world could avert.

It was absolutely correct to say that Canada prospered under protection, for the Mackenzie government which was defeated in the year 1878 was the last free trade government in Canada. There have been Liberal governments in Canada of course since that time, but there has never been a free trade government. The principle of protection adopted by Sir John Macdonald has never been altered, although it may have been varied to meet changing circumstances. Therefore when Dr. Manion says that the Liberals have been free traders when in opposition and protectionists when in power, he states an incontrovertible fact.

The next great political issue which aroused intense interest in Canada was the reciprocity treaty negotiated by the Laurier government with the government of the United States. When the people of Canada realized the immediate object and the ultimate purport of that treaty as stated by Mr. McKinley they killed both the treaty and the government responsible for it. The Liberals of that day were keen for closer trade relations with the United States. Their successors of the present day are not keen for closer trade relations with the Dominions of the British Empire. That is too petty a matter for their consideration. They are hostile to closer trade and political ties with the Empire, because they claim it will endanger a much more important consummation, closer commercial and business relations with the United States and with all the other nations of the world. They put the United States first in the category of friendship, because there are prospects of the immediate election of a Democratic president, and the Democratic Party is assumed to be more of a free trade party than the Republican Party. As a matter of fact, it was members of the Democratic Party who were mainly instrumental in the adoption of measures which dealt the final blow at the little bit of trade Canada was doing with the United States.

The Liberals do not want imperial trade. They say they want world trade. Well, in what part of the world are they going to get it? Possibly in Russia, for which they seem to have an abiding affection. The issues are plain enough, and if the people of Canada cannot be aroused to take an interest in them, then the case would seem to be hopeless.

SMILING BACK
The days slip by so gaily,
No sense of loss or luck,
If through the hours when care
would come,
You just keep smiling back.
If you but hold in memory
Some joy that smiled at you,
And keep on smiling back again
Your hope will bloom anew!
For hope is like a flower
That needs the sunlight's glow,
And when the sun is shining
Will help your hope to grow.
When troubles would defeat you
All the sky looks black,
Recall some smiling yesterday
And just keep smiling back.

CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

MAKING YOUR OWN BREAKS

In team-of-four play at duplicate contract, when the teams are even-ly matched, it is the general custom for the players to proceed charitably until they see opportunity, either presented by their opponents or made by themselves, for making a break which will give them a commanding lead. If they have been securing good results, there is, of course, no object in doing other than coast along until the chance for the break comes.

An example of making a break, which won a recent team-of-four contest at the Asbury Park tournament, was the case of a commanding lead, occurred on the hand below:

WILL OBSERVE TRAFALGAR DAY

Impressive Ceremonies Here This Morning to Commemorate Battle

Commemorating the one hundred and twenty-seventh anniversary of the memorable day in British naval history when Lord Nelson displayed his famous signal, "England expects every man to do his duty," at the Battle of Trafalgar, an impressive ceremonial will take place in Parliament Square shortly before 10 o'clock in the morning. Hon. J. W. Fortham Johnson, Lieutenant-Governor; Hon. Joshua Hinchliffe, Minister of Education, and Mayor David Leeming will be the speakers.

The guard of honor will be furnished by the Royal Canadian Navy and also the color party, Executives of the Victoria and Island Division of the Navy League of Canada, under whose auspices the ceremonies are being held, have been invited to attend, and Commander Victor G. Brodeur, senior naval officer at Esquimalt, and Brigadier J. Sutherland Brown, C.M.G., D.S.O., are also expected to be present.

PROGRAMME FOR MORNING
The complete programme for the morning ceremonies follows:
9:50—Arrival of guard of honor.
9:55—Arrival of the Lieutenant-Governor and party. Bugle sounds "Alert." Guard of honor presents arms. Guard slopes arms. Inspection of guard of honor and Rainbow Cadet Corps by Lieutenant-Governor.
10:00—Bugle sounds "Attention" and "Admiral's Salute." Guard presents arms. Holding of signal. School children sing "O Canada." Guard slopes arms. Bugle sounds "Carry On." Guard stands at ease. Speeches by Lieutenant-Governor, Minister of Education and Mayor of Victoria. Guard presents arms. National Anthem. March off.

The local organizations taking part will include the Municipal Chapter, I.O.D.E.; Primrose Chapter, I.O.D.E.; Naval Veterans, Army and Navy Veterans, Canadian Legion, British Empire Service League, Boy Scouts, Girl Guides and Sea Cadets. "This afternoon the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Navy League will be holding a social at the Rainbow Sea Cadet quarters at the Outer Dock, where tea will be served."

TO GIVE EXHIBITION

The Sea Cadets will give an exhibition of their efficiency under the leadership of Lieut.-Commander Tribe, Lieut. Henry W. O. McGregor and other instructors.

In the evening the annual Trafalgar Day banquet of the Naval Veterans' Branch of the Canadian Legion will be held in the Chamber of Commerce, commencing at 7 o'clock, when naval and military officers of this district will attend and give the feature addresses.

Letters to the Editor

MR. MAY I have the courtesy of your paper to again, appeal to the citizens of Victoria for aid in support of the workroom for unemployed women?

The Women's Workroom Committee has just held its first annual meeting, and the reports show that many women, who otherwise would have been able to earn sufficient to keep the wolf from the door, have been able to find employment—just that amount of employment which would enable them to keep their heads above water.

Trafalgar Is Still Lasting Inspiration To Naval Students

Hundred and Twenty-Seventh Anniversary Commemorated Today—Society Sponsors Preservation of H.M.S. Victory as Monument to Lord Nelson's Courage and Patriotism

By MAJOR F. V. LONGSTAFF
Member of the Society for Nautical Research.

FOR 109 years H.M.S. Victory has never left Portsmouth harbor. The last move in the harbor took place on the 12th of January, 1922, when the old wooden wall was shifted into No. 2 drydock, the oldest surviving drydock in the world. The gate was then replaced by a concrete wall. The new berth will be reserved for the ship in perpetuity and the old hull is supported in an inconspicuous steel cradle. The lower masts have steel centres which pierce the keel and rest on the concrete of the dock floor. Thin steel rope stays lead from the heads of the lower masts to anchorages in the ground beyond the dock edges.

There is an oak tablet on board the Victory with the following inscription: "H.M.S. Victory, laid down 1759, launched 1765, was after 157 years of service placed in her present berth, the oldest dock in the world, and restored to her condition as at Trafalgar under the superintendence of the Society for Nautical Research. To commemorate the completion of the work, this tablet was unveiled July 17, 1928, by H.M. King George V."

SENTIMENTAL INTEREST
After the above tablet had been unveiled, His Majesty addressed those who had been responsible for the restoration, and said he hoped the Victory would last for centuries to come. Her sentimental interest had been growing stronger year by year; and now there was added an educational and instructional value which would bear fruit in generations yet unborn.

During the annual celebrations of Navy Week at Portsmouth, early in August last, some new features were introduced on board the Victory. A church service was held on board the old ship on Sunday morning, July 31, followed by a celebration of holy communion in Nelson's cabin, at which Nelson's own communion plate was used. The Bishop of Portsmouth (the Rev. J. Nevill Lovett) preached from the poop, on which were also accommodated the four "rates" would have been complete and thus have enabled the student to better comprehend the working of the squadrons of British sailing fleet, when the weather position was always being sought after by seamen. It is very difficult for most of us today to understand the many months which a sailing ship of the line was able to keep the sea without going into port. The roughness of much of the rigging of the restored Victory demonstrates the fact that all the sea officers of Nelson's time cared about was to keep their ships seaworthy, and they did not care two pence about the finish of the standing or running rigging so long as it did its work.

Fighting Deck of H.M.S. Victory

ABOVE is depicted the upper deck of Lord Nelson's Victory, showing prominently the type of gun forecastele. H.M.S. Victory, since its reconversion, is exactly as it was when Lord Nelson walked the deck and issued his famous command that "England expects that every man will do his duty."

USE OF SAILS
It should be remembered that the chief use of sails at Trafalgar was to so manoeuvre the floating gun platforms as to enable the admirals and captains to concentrate a superiority of fire from two or more of their ships on to one of those of the enemy. All questions of the sizes of guns, their painting and their gear, as used at Trafalgar, can now be studied in the restored Victory. It should be remembered that after 1811 the custom of "spit and polish" began, to the great misery of the sailors. Until that time the guns were completely painted and so protected all the metal from the action of the sea water and air. The leads of many of the braces and other running rigging were to the bulwarks instead of to the topmasts, so that when any part was injured by shot or fell overboard it was still attached to the ship by several ropes. After an action, the rigging was quickly repaired by means of bands and hitches, which were made secure by means of lashings. There was no time for the fine and finished work of splicing and ornamental rope work.

Within the last year the correct method of belaying the rigging has been agreed upon by the Victory committee. Since then the bulwarks, cleats, pin-racks, pins, fore and main sheet blocks, chest-trees, fore sheet and stunsail tack blocks have been fitted, and should prove a welcome object lesson to the many keen and capable model-makers who visit the ship.

PRESIDING GENIUS
In a recent article on "The Navy," by the naval correspondent of The Morning Post, Captain Acworth ends up by saying: "Lord Nelson is still the presiding genius of the navy, for in his frail body, and by no means perfect character, he combined the greatest qualities of the British seamen of all ranks and classes. No effort of modern cynicism can wear England from her reliance on that chivalrous and manly fighting spirit of which Nelson is the shrine and the symbol. He is the shining light of the Navy and Merchant Marine emblem."

As Nelson's celebrated signal is sometimes quoted incorrectly, it has been considered advisable to give it as it was by the flags of the Popham's Telegraphic Signals.

TAKEN AS A PRIZE
Launched by the French in 1800, the Implacable fought at Trafalgar as the Duguay-Trouin. She was captured a fortnight later and was taken into Plymouth as a prize, where she was refitted and commissioned as H.M.S. Implacable, so that now she is in her 132nd year, with twenty years at Plymouth.

The forty-six-gun frigate, Trincomalee, was launched at Bombay about 1810, and served on the Pacific station during 1853-54 under Captain Wallace Houston, when she took supplies from Esquimaux to H.M.S. Plover in the Arctic. In 1897 the Trincomalee was shown in the Navy List as late Royal Naval Reserve drill ship, Southampton Water, where she was bought by the late Mr. J. R. Wheatley Cobb, and renamed after Nelson's Poudroyant, which had been wrecked off Blackpool in the same year. So that here we have the Victory ashore restored to her condition at Trafalgar; the Implacable, a seventy-four-gun two-decker, and the frigate Poudroyant, of forty-six guns, all assembled at Portsmouth in the care of those who intend to restore and preserve them for as long as possible.

FREDERICK MORRISSEY IS SENTENCED TO ONE YEAR ON FRAUD COUNT

Frederick Morrissey, who pleaded guilty to three charges of fraud and forgery, was sentenced to one year in prison when he appeared before the Acting Magistrate C. J. Prior, in the Acting Magistrate's court yesterday morning for sentence.

Morrissey, whom the court was informed had a previous criminal record in Victoria, Toronto and Galt, Ontario, stated that he had cashed the worthless cheques during a moment of panic because he could not meet his room rent and had other obligations. He had been out of work for some time. He said he was a single man.

On a wet day a young man driving a car applied the brakes too suddenly with the result that he skidded badly and pulled up within an inch of the curb.

A policeman strode up and said: "My word, sir, you got a nice skid there!"

"ardon me," said the driver, haughtily, "this lady is my wife!"

COAL OUTPUT IS RECORDED

B.C. Production for Nine Months This Year Was 1,122,855 Tons

Coal production in British Columbia for the first nine months of this year reached 1,122,855 tons, it was reported yesterday by the Department of Mines. This compares favourably with 1,199,160 tons for the corresponding period last year. September output was 122,218 tons, compared with 144,147 tons in the same month of 1931. In addition, 25,900 tons of coke were produced between January and September, inclusive.

The output by districts during September was as follows: Vancouver Island, 62,197 tons; Nicola-Princeton, 17,834 tons; East Kootenay, 42,137 tons; coke at Coal Creek and Michel, 1,475 tons.

The Nicola-Princeton district had an actual increase in production in September, over the same month in 1931, the increase, however, being slight. Vancouver Island mined almost the same tonnage as in the corresponding month last year. The East Kootenay district took a material decrease from 58,658 tons to 42,137 tons, for September, 1931, and last month, respectively.

S.P.C.A. Inspector Had Busy Session During Past Month

The monthly meeting of the committee of the Victoria branch of the British Columbia Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was held this week. The Inspector's time has been largely taken up with the problem of stray and unwanted cats, and complaints are continually being received of depredations of cats which are permitted to wander at large. This question has been taken up much of the committee's time, and it is felt that this is a matter which affects the whole community. A tax has often been suggested as being the best means of controlling this pest, but no workable scheme has been formulated.

This society offers a reward of $5 to anyone giving information leading to the conviction of any person found guilty of infringing Sec 13b of the British Columbia Game Act, which reads as follows: "No person shall, at any place in the vicinity of any forest or woodland or in any locality where game is usually found, release or turn at large any cat for the purpose of abandoning same."

BIRD SANCTUARY
A letter appearing in The Colonist of October 11, in which the writer complained of water fowl being shot at in Oak Bay was read. This portion of the shore is included in a bird sanctuary in which shooting is prohibited. The attention of the Provincial Game Department was called to this matter.

It was decided to hold the annual general meeting on Tuesday, November 22, at Room A, Campbell Building. Those interested in the work of the society are cordially invited to attend.

Cases of cruelty or neglect should be reported to the Inspector, G. A. Allen, telephone Empire 8331, or to A. R. Sherwood, secretary-treasurer, telephone Empire 7556.

NANAIMO, Oct. 20.—A delightful tea was held at the home of Mrs. Frank Cunliffe, Stewart Avenue, yesterday afternoon by the Bastion Chapter, I.O.D.E., in commemoration of Trafalgar Day. A substantial sum was realized. The reception rooms were bright with red and white chrysanthemums. A musical programme was given, those taking part being Mrs. W. P. McDonald, Mrs. M. Kelghy, Miss Lenora Davidson, Mrs. James Rennie, Miss Ella Dobson, Mrs. M. Lane, Mrs. Parsons and Mrs. Adams. A guessing contest involving the name of an illuminated ship, was won by Mrs. Dave Borland, who named the craft the Victory, of historic fame. Refreshments were served by a capable committee.

DANCE AT NANAIMO

NANAIMO, Oct. 20.—A large crowd of dancers was present at Pym's Pavilion, last evening, to attend the Elks annual hayseed charity ball. Not many of the male dancers seemed to have taken to the "hick" idea of dress, but the majority of the ladies made their appearance in print or calico dresses, which presented a scene of variegated color and animation. The regular meeting of Victoria Lodge, No. 81, Daughters of St. George, was held on Wednesday evening in the S.O.E. Hall, Sister Penketh, W.P., in the chair. Final arrangements were made for the bazaar to be held in the S.O.E. Hall on November 16, when the following will take part: Convener, Mrs. Penketh; contest, Mrs. Gurney, Mrs. Gaiger, Miss Reid; fancywork, Mrs. M. Harris, Mrs. A. Harris and Mrs. Veitch; house-house, Mrs. Quinn and Mrs. Bell home cooking, Mrs. Fuller and Mrs. Pakinson; flowers, Mrs. Petrie; candy, Mrs. Brien; bran tub, Mrs. Muckle; tea-cup reading, Mrs. Mossop and Mrs. House; refreshments, Mrs. Bryant and Mrs. Williams. A report of the rummage sale held on Saturday was read and later cards were played, the winners being Mrs. Muckle, Mrs. Bryant, Mrs. Gurney and Mrs. Bell. The bed jacket presented by Mrs. Mary Williams was won by Mrs. Gaiger. Refreshments were served.

Metropolitan Circle

The Metropolitan Mission Circle met on Wednesday at 6:15 o'clock, and after the usual supper meeting, a devotional period was held. The Scripture selections were read by Mary Scott and Flossie Pierce. Prayers were said by Agnes Dennist and Mary Crouch. A vocal duet was sung by Enid and Miriam Church. Miss Hazel Sargent was warmly welcomed by the girls as the new leader, and honorary president of the circle. Miss Sargent then gave a most interesting talk on "Korea," the meeting closing with the watchword.

Lutheran W.M.A.

At a recent meeting of the Women's Missionary Auxiliary of the Grace Lutheran Church, the following were elected delegates to the twenty-sixth annual convention of the Pacific Synodical meeting at Centalla, Wash., October 25 to 27: Mrs. R. Fuller and Mrs. L. Schmelz. Mrs. T. A. Jansen, president of the Synodical Convention, will also attend from the local church. The annual W.M.A. public thankoffering service was set for November 20, to be held with the morning service. The date of the annual bazaar was set for Friday, December 2.

St. Andrew's W.M.A.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian W.M.A. held its regular meeting with a good attendance. Mrs. Kennedy presided, and the devotional part of the meeting was taken by Mrs. Kennedy and Mrs. Fuller. After the business discussion, a solo was sung by Mrs. H. C. Fraser. A paper on "The Bhils of India, and Our Missionary Work There," was read by Mrs. F. Moore. The meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. J. F. MacLean, traveling deaconess for British Columbia. The annual thankoffering meeting will be held on the evening of Wednesday, November 2.

SIDNEY SOCIAL CLUB

The Sidney Social Club held its regular monthly five hundred in the Scout and Guide Hall at Sidney. The following members had the highest number of discs out of nine tables in play: Mrs. G. Neaves, Mrs. R. Pike, Mr. R. N. MacAulay and Mr. W. Watson. High bids were won by Mrs. McCordendale and Mr. S. Hill. The hostess for the evening was Mrs. T. Lidgate. The evening was brought to a close with music.

LANGFORD

The opening card party under the series sponsored by the Women's Institute was held on Wednesday evening and proved to be a very happy event. The attendance was encouraging, and refreshments were served by the committee. Miss Savory (convener), Mrs. H. A. Hinks, Mrs. J. E. Macdonald and Mrs. R. J. Smith. The prize winners were: First lady, Mrs. H. A. Hinks;

CHAPTER XXIX

Above the fray, Long-Sword looked down—it seemed approvingly. Many was the time Long-Sword had been mixed up in this sort of free-for-all. If he had a criticism to offer, it was probably a regret that there was no battle-axe-wound. Apart from that, he had nothing to suggest. The affair had begun to develop on the most satisfactory lines, for now Sir Herbert Bassinger had been drawn into the battle-swirl.

At the beginning of the struggle, Sir Herbert had stood aloof, contenting himself with word and gesture, but now a swift turn on the part of Silingsby caused the ladder to revolve in his direction. Syd shifted his hold from the butler's coat to the ladder itself, it swung menacingly at the baronet's waistcoat, and he pushed it away. Silingsby and Charles gave a quick shout and then pulled downwards. This placed Sir Herbert in jeopardy once more. To avoid being hit on the shins, he leaped like a young lamb in Springtime, and, descending, found himself with one leg between the rungs. In this position he hoped madly.

"Stop it!" bellowed Sir Herbert. "Can't you see you're pulling me apart? Stop it! I'm caught!"

The butler heard the voice of authority, and was not deaf to his pleadings. With a mighty effort he jerked the ladder down. It swung sharply upwards, and Syd, being in the path, dropped like corn before the sickle.

"Let me out!"

The ladder fell. Sir Herbert fell into a chair, clutching his foot.

"Hell and blazes!" cried Sir Herbert in agony. "My gouty toe, too!" He glared at Syd. "It's all your fault, you confounded hooligan!"

Mere verbal abuse could not hurt Syd now. He had passed that phase. He was clapping his stomach and rocking agitatedly.

"If any of my innards are knocked out of place," he stated, "I'll have the law on the blooming lot of you!"

Silingsby turned to Silingsby. Doom was in his face.

"Silingsby, will you see this young man off the premises as quickly as possible."

A beatific smile came into the butler's cavernous face.

"Beg pardon, could I hear that again, Sir Herbert?"

"See," said Lady Lydia, "that he is packed up and shown the way to the park gates."

"Yes, m'lady. Thank you, m'lady."

Licking his lips, the butler examined the toe of his right shoe for a moment, then, clenching and unclenching his hands he advanced upon Syd.

Syd backed towards the window.

"Now, then," he urged. "No violence!"

Ma Price threw herself in the path of vengeance.

"Theodore! Don't you dare to touch him!"

"Out of the way, Bella!"

"I've warned you," said Syd nervously, continuing his retreat. Then Lady Lydia's advance became too menacing to be endured, he made a sudden bolt for the window, and, doing so, collided heavily with Tony, who, followed by Freddie and Polly, was at that moment coming in.

Tony caught Syd neatly and bounced him back into the room.

"Football season's begun early this year, hasn't it?" he said puzzled. He looked from Silingsby, who was breathing heavily and seemed as if at any moment he might begin exhaling fire, to Syd who had taken refuge behind the sofa and was standing there pointing a heavy vase in mingled defence and defiance. "What's it all about?"

Sir Herbert answered the question.

"Only Lord Drotwich proving his gentle birth by bawling with the butler."

Syd was gruffly apologetic.

"Perhaps I was wrong to get my monkey up, but I saw red."

"You look red," said Freddie.

"I don't suppose I'm the first Drotwich to make a mistake."

"No," agreed Sir Herbert. "If you're Drotwich, your father made a big one."

Syd was wounded. He addressed himself to Ma Price.

"Ear that?" He turned to Sir Herbert. "In the face of extreme provocation," he said with dignity. "I've done me best to keep on friendly terms with you and Aunt Lydia, but it didn't seem to be any use."

"But what's the trouble about?" asked Tony.

Sir Herbert snorted. His recent experiences had left him ruffled. The pain in his toe had begun to abate, but his feelings were still outraged.

"He was trying to remove the Poursbous."

"I wasn't," said Syd heatedly. "All I was after was that picture up there."

"The name of the artist who painted the portrait of Long-Sword?" asked Lady Lydia, with frigid scorn, "was Poursbous."

"Oh?" Syd seemed to digest this. "Well, 'ave it your own way." Tony looked puzzled.

"What did you want old Long-Sword for?" he asked.

"So as there shouldn't be any lampin' with him, I didn't want his face altered before I got him into court. Ma," said Syd, waving his hand, "take a squirt at that old jester and tell me who he reminds you of."

"Well..."

"Is he like me or isn't he?" demanded Syd impatiently.

"Ma Price peered at the portrait. "It certainly does look like you, dearie."

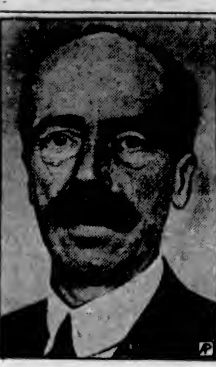

"He wasn't quite got my expression. The determination, I mean. Maybe he had it, and old Porpoise the painter didn't put it in. Still, my wipers think that old bloke is trying to 'elp me out, and I don't intend to have any serpents tamperin' with him."

Tony laughed.

"Is that all that's troubling you?"

"You needn't worry. I'll see that Long-Sword is in court to witness the struggle, complete with face as at present.

"Well," said Syd, impressed. "You may be a barber's son, but, blimey, you fight like a gentleman. I suppose you know that picture is going to dish you properly? What mean, if Ma sticks to her evidence the way she's going to."

"Very likely."

Syd seemed a little bewildered.

"Don't you want to win the case?" he asked.

"Well, honestly," said Tony, "after hearing Freddie's news, I admit I'm wavering. You see, if I win, I shall be Lord Drotwich."

"You won't win."

"And if I don't—meet Price, the millionaire."

"What on earth," demanded Sir Herbert peevishly, "are you talking about?"

"Tell them, Freddie."

The Hon. Freddie stepped forward with his customary grace.

There was always in the demeanor of the Hon. Freddie Chalk-Marshall, when mingling with his fellow men, the suggestion that he looked upon himself as the only responsible adult in a gathering of half-witted children. This now had become subtly intensified. He surveyed the little group before him with a fatherly eye. He seemed to be saying that, if only people would leave everything to him, there would never be any bother or trouble whatsoever.

He cleared his throat, shot his cuffs and began to speak.

Burgess Bedtime Stories

An Unhappy Little Dog
By THORNTON W. BURGESS

Of all the punishments devised, none equals feeling you're despised.

—Flip the Terrier.

Of all the unhappy little dogs in all the great world Flip was the unhappiest. He was sure of it. He was sure that no other dog could possibly feel so miserable, lonesome, and altogether unhappy. He was an outcast. No one would let him come near, not even his beloved master, Farmer Brown's Boy, or his chum, Bowser the Hound. He just had to stay by himself, he whose nature was so friendly and so social, and at the same time he felt that his life was despised. Yes, Flip was a most unhappy little dog.

Chasing Peter Rabbit, he had almost run into Jimmy Skunk before he saw him, and Jimmy had promptly used his little scent gun, while Peter Rabbit had hopped away to the safety of the old stone wall. It had all happened in an instant. One minute he had been filled with the fierce joy of the chase, eager to catch and to kill, although the one he pursued had done and could do him no harm. The next minute he was rolling in the grass, choking, gasping, for the moment blinded, his eyes smarting, then, feeling very sick and carrying with him the dreadful scent from the little scent gun of Jimmy Skunk, he had sneaked back to the barnyard.

His head, usually carried high, hung in shame. Had he had any thing more than a stub of a tail it would have been between his legs. When he reached the yard he hesitated. Finally he started toward the little house he sometimes shared with Bowser the Hound. He was met by such a deep growl from Jimmy Skunk that he hastily retreated. Never had he expected to be growled at like that by his old chum.

"Keep away from me," growled Bowser, "and keep away from this house! If you had come home with me, you wouldn't have happened. I thought you had more sense than to bother Jimmy Skunk."

"I didn't bother him. Anyway, I didn't go to bother him. I just almost ran into him!" explained Flip miserably.

"You should have known better than to go to bother him," retorted Bowser with no sympathy at all. Jimmy Skunk is a bad person to almost run into. Pheew! Clear out! And don't try to come near me or this house. If you do, I'll make you sorer than you are now."

Mournfully, Flip looked at his old chum and decided that he meant what he said. He turned and made his way hesitatingly toward the back door of Farmer Brown's house. He didn't know how to get in, for the door was swung open and Mother Brown stood in the doorway. Flip stopped and hung his head lower than ever.

"My dear boy," exclaimed Mother Brown, shaking her apron at Flip. "Go away, Flip! Go away and don't you dare come near this house until you are rid of that dreadful smell. Land of Goshen, I thought you had more sense than to bother Jimmy Skunk."

"Shoo! Go away!"

Flip slunk away toward the barn. That first time he had had some sympathy because he had known nothing about Jimmy Skunk. Now it was different. At the barn door he was met by Farmer Brown's Boy. He promptly closed the door. He waved Flip away.

"So," he exclaimed, "you have been in trouble with Jimmy Skunk! I thought you were better than that. Pheew! I suppose I've got to give you a bath and then you'll have to stay out of the house and out of the barn until you are rid of that smell!"

So Farmer Brown's Boy prepared a box for Flip to sleep in and put it out back of the barn corner. Then Flip was given a bath and tied to that box, and there he had to stay. His food was brought to him and every day he was given a chance to exercise. Otherwise he was left to himself with nothing to do but pity himself and be, oh so lonesome and unhappy.

"They don't know," he thought mournfully. "They think I didn't have sense enough not to attack Jimmy Skunk, when all the time it was an accident. That is what it was, an accident."

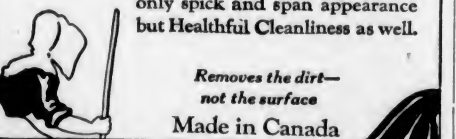

The next story: "Flip Proves His Lesson Learned."

"Go away, Flip, go away, and don't you dare come near this house!"

"WHAT A LIFE, Trying to Live Without a Telephone!"

WE SAID to our artist: "Draw a good-natured picture of the telephone doing its work. Make people see the value of a telephone in the home." Here is the result. The foiled burglar, the hurry-up call for a doctor, the man who got a job by telephone, the shopping trip which the telephone saved the housewife, the invitation which was received by telephone. No wonder the artist suggested the heading:

EUROPEAN STAR IN EMPIRE FILM

Renate Muller, Blond Favorite of the Continent, in "Sunshine Susie," Opening Today

A Continental film star takes her place overnight beside the luminaries of Hollywood, and a comparatively unknown director scales the heights to stand alongside the great as a result of their work in a single picture—"Sunshine Susie," which comes to the Empire Theatre today.

The newest star is lovely, blonde Renate Muller, long a stage and screen favorite abroad. The director is Victor Saville, whom critics abroad, where the picture is a long-run sensation, have compared with Ernst Lubitsch. "Sunshine Susie" is said to carry fully as much charm, sheer delight and heart-warming entertainment as either of Lubitsch's great comedies with music—"The Love Parade" and "The Smiling Lieutenant."

Supporting Miss Muller, who plays the title role, are handsome Owen Nares and Jack Hulbert, ace of English farceurs.

AMUSEMENTS

On the Screen
Capitol—Wheeler and Woolsey in "Hold 'Em Jail."
Columbia—"High Speed," starring Buck Jones.
Dominion—Marlene Dietrich in "The Blonde Venus."
Empire—"Sunshine Susie," starring Renate Muller.
Playhouse—Helen Chandler in "Salvation Nell."
Crystal Garden—Swimming and Dancing.

PLAYHOUSE Helen Chandler, who plays the role of Nell in "Salvation Nell," a James Cruze production adapted for the screen from E. B. Sheldon's immortal play, now at the Playhouse Theatre, gives one of the most dramatic portrayals of the famous part that has ever been witnessed. In addition to Helen Chandler and Ralph Graves in the leading roles, there is an outstanding support, including Sally O'Neill, Jason Robards, Charlotte Walker, Matthew Betz, Wally Albright and De Witt Jennings.

CAPITOL Come on, you rooters! The big game of the "Prison Conference" is being played at the Capitol Theatre, where Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey are costarring in the RKO-Radio comedy, "Hold 'Em Jail," with Edna May Oliver, Edgar Kennedy, Roscoe "Stuttering" Ates and Betty Grable in the featured cast. Wheeler and Woolsey are manly plays of the Bidmore convict lineup. Miss Oliver, Kennedy and Miss Grable cheer them on to victory. A second feature is a tragic-comic drama, starring Peggy Shannon in "Hotel Continental."

DOMINION Cary Grant, who plays a prominent supporting role in Marlene Dietrich's starring film, "Blonde Venus," now at the Dominion Theatre, was so fascinated by the stage as a boy that he ran away from home in Bristol, England, to join a "knockabout" theatrical company. "Knockabouts" in England are acrobats.

COLUMBIA Buck Jones is seen this week at the Columbia Theatre, minus the wide sombrero and wooly chaps of his usual screen characterization. In his new Columbia picture, "High Speed," he has a new type of role as a daring young race track driver. Loreta Sayers has the leading feminine part in the picture, which was directed by D. Ross Lederman. William Walling, Ed Le Saint, Wallace MacDonald, Ward Bond and Pat O'Malley have other leading roles.

FIVE GREAT STARS IN "GRAND HOTEL"

Five stars instead of one shine in "Grand Hotel," spectacular picturization of the celebrated Vicki Baum novel and play, which will head the programme at the Dominion Theatre starting tomorrow. In bringing it to the screen, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer placed five of its major stars in the central characters and engaged Edmund Gouling, director of "Devil's Holiday" and "The Trespasser," to handle the ambitious assignment. The remarkable cast is headed by Greta Garbo, with John Barrymore, Joan Crawford, Wallace Beery and Lionel Barrymore playing outstanding roles. Lewis Stone and Jean Herscholt are featured in the large supporting cast.

MANY COMIC SCENES IN HUMOROUS OPERA

Much fine comedy, both in song, lines and action will mark the Victoria Operatic Society's first production, "The Geisha," this season. Such songs as the "Interfering Parrot," "Chin-Chin-Chinaman," "We're Going to Call on the Marquis" and "The Amorous Goldfish," have been very popular in previous productions of the opera, and with good comedians in the characters who sing them, Victoria audiences are sure of a hearty laugh when they attend "The Geisha" on October 28 and 29, at the Royal Victoria Theatre.

Possibly the funniest of all the many comic scenes in this very humorous opera is the "Auction Scene," where Wun-Hi, his rival Chinese, and the Marquis smartly haggle over the price for O Mimosan, the poor little Geisha who has no desire whatsoever to marry the great Marquis, chief of police and governor of the province. Fortunately for O Mimosan, the competitors lose to a very surprising bidder. And Molly Seymour, disguised for a prank as a geisha, is auctioned off instead, which increases the suspense and possibilities for many humorous situations.

MAJOR J. G. RYCKROFT GIVES ADDRESS ON HISTORY OF RUSSIA

Major J. G. Ryckroft, district intelligence officer, addressed the United Service Club last evening on the subject of "Russia." The address was preliminary to one to be given by him before the same organization next Wednesday, when he will deal with the five-year-plan of the Russian Government.

His address last night dealt with the character of the country embraced in the Russian domains, its people and their history from early times, and was of a very interesting nature.

PILES

Ended Without Cutting or Salves

If you think a surgical operation is the only way to get rid of itching, bleeding or protruding Piles, it's because you haven't heard of the harmless internal medicine discovered by a prominent Western physician.

After years of study, Dr. J. S. Leonhardt found the cause of Piles to be internal—congestion of blood in the lower bowel—the hemorrhoidal veins tummy; the bowel walls weak; the parts almost dead. Right away the doctor set to work to find a real internal remedy. He succeeded, and after prescribing it for 1,000 patients, with success in over 900 cases, he named his prescription HEM-ROID.

The doctor wants every Pile sufferer to benefit by his discovery, and so there will be no doubling or delay, MacFarlane and Vancouver Drug Stores and druggists everywhere are authorized to sell HEM-ROID with guarantee of money-back if it does not end Piles in any form.

So why waste time on external treatments or think of an operation when HEM-ROID tablets are guaranteed.

MANY VISITORS INSPECT SCHOOL

Craigflower Museum Gallery of Pioneers to Have Additional Photographs

The trustees of the Craigflower Museum, composed of Native Sons and Native Daughters of British Columbia, held an enthusiastic meeting last night at which a gratifying report on the number of visitors to the museum was given.

Presentation of a picture of Samuel Sheppard, a former teacher of the school, and a gift of daffodil bulbs from Mr. Heller, of Uclulet, were appreciated. These bulbs will be planted in the museum grounds to enhance the beauty of the spot. Owing to the large number of pictures of old pupils and teachers of the school awaiting enlargement, the meeting decided to hold an informal dance on November 18 to raise funds to defray the expenses. Tickets may be obtained from members of Post Number Three, Native Daughters of British Columbia, or Post Number One, Native Sons of British Columbia.

start on November 5, with the final set for November 12. Alf C. Dowd, secretary of the Western Canada Rugby Football Union, announced the playdown schedule here today.

In the senior division, on November 5, Manitoba champions (Winnipeg Saint Johns) play at the home of the Saskatchewan winners, while Alberta (represented by the Altomahs of Calgary) play at the home of the British Columbia winners. The latter series may be two games instead of sudden death, if mutually arranged between contesting clubs. The winners of Manitoba-Saskatchewan play the final at the home of the Alberta-British Columbia winners.

In the junior division, Saskatchewan plays at Manitoba, November 5, and the winner of this series travels to Alberta for the final on November 12, providing the senior final is not in the same city in which event Alberta will play at the home of the Manitoba-Saskatchewan winner.

Four Generations of Golfers

Four generations of golfers—John White, who will be ninety-one next January; Mrs. J. Pope Barnes, a daughter; Mrs. E. E. Church, a granddaughter, and John Church, a great-grandson. The caddy is Hugh Church, another great-grandson of Mr. White. The picture was taken last week at Riverside Golf Club.

It was a foursome at Riverside Golf Club, Saint John, N.B., just last week. And the players were four generations of the White family.

There was John White, who will be ninety-one next January and is the oldest golfer in the British Empire. There was John White's daughter, Mrs. J. Pope Barnes. There was his granddaughter, Mrs. E. E. Church. And John White's great-grandson, John Church. A golfing family.

"He's coming along fine, that lad," said old Mr. White of young Mr. Church.

"You can't beat him, for his age," said young Mr. Church of old Mr. White.

Mr. White started playing golf in Fifeshire, Scotland, back in 1858, and he still has a caddy that he got about that time, and an old driver fashioned by the famous Tom Morris, of St. Andrews.

He came to Saint John in 1862, taking a prominent part in the business life of the city and introducing the game of golf. His little red golf jacket and short mincing steps are familiar to the Riverside Golf and Country Club membership—almost a tradition—and they consider it a rare treat to go around the course with him, not only to observe the consistency of his golf, but to enjoy his fund of golfing anecdotes and ready wit.

Mr. White is set in the conviction that golf is the finest game in the world. But he's not one of those who believe the old timers had it all over the rising generation.

"Yes," he'll say, "golf has been more scientific in recent years. It's spreading out, and as more play it, more skill is brought into the game."

And then, perhaps, Mr. White will recount that when he first saw golf over in Scotland, where he was born, the players were using little feather balls—the feathers rolled up "tight as a drum" and tied with many windings of string.

"On a wet day you'd see the feathers fly," he'll chuckle.

"Is that where that expression about 'flying feathers' came from?"

"Perhaps. Perhaps."

And after that they got gutta percha balls.

Mr. White, when asked why he and John D. Rockefeller, the oldest golfer in the United States, didn't arrange a match, replied, "I'm afraid he might beat me."

Local Grid Squad Confident of Win Against Meralomas

Capitals Out to Stop Undeclared Leaders of Big Four League in Important Fixture at Royal Athletic Park Tomorrow Afternoon —Managers Release Line-Ups

Victoria	1	2	28	66	.333
Varsity	1	3	6	47	.250

Jubilant over their decisive victory over University of British Columbia last week at the local enclosure, Victoria Capitals will march on the field at the Royal Athletic Park tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock bent on stopping the Meralomas, undefeated leaders of the Big Four (Canadian Rugby League, in what is expected to be one of the best fixtures of the Canadian code played here for several seasons. Victoria must win to stay in the championship fight and therefore will be in there fighting tooth and nail for a victory.

Three grid squads, New Westminster, V.A.C. and Varsity, have all attempted to lower the colors of the fighting Meralomas aggression but their efforts have been all in vain. Victoria is going out to accomplish what others have failed to do. Confidence reigned in the local camp last night after the workout, and Manager Benny McMillen and Coach Doug Roberts appear satisfied with the spirit prevailing and the condition of their underdogs for this crucial fixture.

Victory for the local grid machine will put them right in the thick of the scramble for the Big Four championship, while a decision the other way will practically hand over the title to the Meralomas squad. The locals have been working out at the scene of the battle each evening for the game and will conclude their training this evening with a light workout.

LOCALS POWERFUL
Victoria's aerial attack last Saturday was instrumental in accounting for the Point Grey students. McMillen and Roberts have worked out several new plays to throw at Meralomas. Coach Roberts stated yesterday that the Capitals would take the field with the same line-up as last week, which means that Roddy McInnes will be at left end, Chris Usher at left tackle and Bob Engleson at left guard. John Plant will be at centre and Bunny Cox at right guard, with Ian Acland at right tackle. Lynn Patrick will be assigned to right end and Sandy Smith will look after quarterback position. Muzz Patrick, Frank Gribble, Wally Stipe and Brian Hunning will form the halfback line. Ready to rody at a moment's notice will be Haddon, Bruce Forbes, Ted Colgate, Bert Butler, Rasmussen, Doswell and Billingsley.

Meralomas' management announced their line-up for the match. It will be as follows: Ellis, Stewart, Niblo, backs; Garvin, Oakenful, ruddies; Elliott, Black, insides; Lowe, Kay, outsiders; Spring, quarterback; Hammond, snap. Reserves will be Lawrence, Edgett, MacLeod, R. Lowe, Grant, Wilson, Ferris, Mackie, Hunt, Lythgoe, Burraston, Aby, Potter.

TORONTO LEAFS MAKE ASSIGNMENT

Unsecured Creditors' Claims Against Club Total Over $125,000

TORONTO, Oct. 30 (CP).—Toronto Baseball and Athletic Company, Ltd., made an authorized assignment before P. G. Cook, registrar in bankruptcy, at Osgoode Hall today. The assignment follows rumors that the club was ready "to give up the ghost" after an unsuccessful season.

R. L. Johnston was appointed custodian.

In the preliminary statement filed, total liabilities of $150,164 and assets of $599,053 are shown. The amount shown as assets consists principally of the value given the real estate and stadium of $597,726. Subscribed capital of $708,100 is stated to be fully paid up.

Unsecured creditors' claims total $125,065.

Sing Sing Grid Ace Signs With Pro Ball Hawkers

Jumbo "Powerhouse" Marino Joins Professional Team Few Hours After Leaving Ancient Institution

By EDWARD J. NEIL Associated Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20 (AP).—Jumbo (Wheehouse) Marino, voted by all his capable classmates the man most likely to succeed, crashed the line for dear old Sing Sing today, and tonight the name of the great football hero rang high through the cloistered halls of the ancient institution by the banks of the placid Hudson.

There may be a depression; work may be scarce; but not for "Jumbo" Marino. Turned away from the walls of his prison alma mater only a few hours, the swarthy fullback of the green and white plunged today into the game of life and came up with a job to play professional football for the Paterson, N.J., "Night Hawks" in the Eastern League.

Athletically, Sing Sing is just a small place, lost among the giants of the pigskin realm. Never a contributor to All-America fame, never invited to provide a tune-up for Yale, a breather for Harvard, or a sacrifice for Notre Dame—not that the warriors of Warden Lawes would not welcome an itinerant to rival the wanderings of the Ramblers of South Bend in their rovingest days.

SING SING PROUD
Nevertheless, Sing Sing is as proud of its athletic reputation as any of these, and proudest of all of William "Jumbo" Marino. Only last Saturday, as 4,000 spectators howled him on to greater deeds of might and daring, Marino tore to shreds the bulwarks of the institution's ancient rival—the police team of Port Jervis, N.Y., and paved the way to a 7-0 win for the Sing Sing grid team.

That was Jumbo's valedictory, for he graduated yesterday, right splunk in the middle of the season. Sing Sing was sorry to see him go. There were pleas that he put aside, for the glory of his alma mater, the allure of the outside world. But Jumbo was adamant. And Warden Lawes was equally insistent that inasmuch as he had served three years on the burglary charge that brought him there from New York City at the age of seventeen, in 1929, he had better go.

A first edition of short stories by Kipling was bought for four cents in an Isleworth, England, second-hand store recently.

—The London Opinion.

It is the power required for the performance of work at the rate of 33,000 English units of work per minute; hence the power exerted in lifting 33,000 pounds at the rate of one foot per minute.
When first introduced more than a century ago the method of estimating the effects of engines was by what were called "horse-powers." Actually, the power of a draught horse of average strength, working eight hours a day, is about four-fifths of a standard "horsepower" unit.
From the original "horse-powers" the "s" was dropped and "ten-horse" or "fifty-horse" became the qualifying expression.
We have an inquiry as to the origin of the term "horsepower," the unit stating the power used to drive certain machinery or to estimate the capability of engines, as "That's a seventy-horsepower engine."
For those laymen who use the term casually and would be interested to understand its significance, an ostrich in South Africa has attained the age of seventy years.
